Drew Findlay Black

is an articling student at Lenczner Slaght.

Drew recently completed his JD at the Dalhousie Schulich School of Law. While at law school Drew honed his advocacy skills through volunteering at the Dalhousie Legal Aid Clinic as part of the tenancy rights project where he provided legal information to members of the Halifax community regarding tenancy issues. Drew was recently selected to work full time at the Clinic in the fall of 2019 as part of the Dalhousie clinical law program. Drew was also the recipient of multiple academic awards in his first year at Dalhousie, including torts and contracts.

For his undergraduate studies, Drew was accepted at the University of King's College Foundation Year Program in Halifax where he went on to study economics and contemporary philosophy in a joint program with Dalhousie University. Drew balanced his academic interests with other diverse pursuits including playing on the King's and Dalhousie rugby teams. Drew was the recipient of the most valuable player award and was also named an Atlantic region all-star.

- A Cautionary Tale: Admissions Against Interest in Regulatory and Subsequent Criminal Proceedings – A recent decision from the Ontario Court of Appeal serves as a cautionary tale for regulated professionals and their counsel considering the terms of a potential resolution of discipline proceedings where related criminal proceedings may still be on the horizon. In R v Lo, the Court of Appeal upheld a trial judge's decision during a criminal jury trial to admit into evidence the Agreed Statement of Fact ("ASF") from a prior disciplinary hearing on related allegations before the College of Psychologists ("CPO").
