

April 23, 2015

Patent-holders can be sued for more than 100 per cent of damages: SCC

Andrew Skodyn is quoted in Canadian Lawyer's Legal Feeds Blog on April 23, 2015 in relation to the recent decision in Sanofi-Aventis v. Apotex and its legal implications.

"Imagine being sued separately by multiple plaintiffs for claims that, together, would be mutually exclusive — like offences that would require you to be in many places at once. Even if you committed a single offence, only one would be physically possible.

Now, imagine losing all these cases and having to pay three or four times what the maximum damage could have been..."

Continue reading:

<http://www.canadianlawyermag.com/legalfeeds/2656/patent-holders-can-be-sued-for-more-than-100-per-cent-of-damages-scc.htmlblog>